Minette Named to Top 50 Influential Women List

The Mecklenburg Times selected Minette Trosch as one of the Top 50 Most Influential Women of 2012.

According to the publisher, the 50 Charlotte-area women chosen for this honor "exemplify the traits required to be outstanding leaders in their chosen fields. Our goal is to highlight some of our city's most successful business women from the public and private sector while revealing the triumphs and challenges that have shaped their careers."

Minette is an attorney with and officer of the firm Conrad Trosch & Kemmy, where her focus is Family Law. Prior to attending law school, Minette served on City Council for five terms and served on numerous national boards and committees. Minette also served as CEO of Take-A-Break, Inc., a retail convenience store chain. She is very active in the community today, volunteering for and supporting many good causes. (Profile)

"I believe strongly in serving the community in which you live. I have tried to practice that belief throughout my life," says Minette. "To be selected for this honor feels like validation of the life path I have traveled, the values I hold dear and the career choices I have made. It has been a truly rewarding experience."
